ADVENTURES IN COUNTRY-404

 @RYBAR

Excerpt
from the situation report

Ukrainian soldiers do not always genuinely want to fight against the Russian Armed Forces. Many were simply mobilized (some against their will), trained, and sent to the front lines, where command sends them into battle, whether they want to or not.

Right on the front line, Ukrainian soldiers often find that the face of their enemy is more humane than that of their own commanders. Therefore, they often decide to surrender.

The brutality of Ukrainian commanders , who send people on 'meat assaults' and set up blocking detachments for their subordinates, has long ceased to be a secret . However, not everyone will pursue their wounded soldier trying to surrender.

Damn it!

They really do hit their own! If I hadn't seen it,
I wouldn't believe it...

Great, and that's how it will be with every deserter! Watch and remember.

I see Igor is alive, but don't tell Coyote!

Of course I won't,
am I an idiot? He'll finish him off...

A Russian drone is coming! Are they going to kill him?

Listen, brother,
it wasn't us!

I already figured out
it was our own!

They probably didn't mean to, but our commander is a real bastard!

WHIRR

What bad luck!
Seems completely
jammed.

Do they have another one, you think?

If they did, it'd be here already...

What's all this chatter?

What are you watching from the drone?

It's that deserter,
still alive, damn it!

Alright, equip the FPV
and finish him off, now!

A dynamic comic book illustration of a soldier in a green uniform and tan vest shouting in agony while firing a machine gun. The scene is set against a backdrop of wooden walls splattered with blood. The soldier's face is contorted in pain, with blood on his forehead and neck. Red speech bubbles with black outlines contain the text "AAAHHH" above and "TRRR" below. The machine gun is shown in mid-fire, with a bright orange-yellow burst of energy at its muzzle.

AAAHHH

TRRR

NO!

ONE, TWO, LIFT!

RUSTLE

There are two more with me coming to surrender.

Quite the reinforcements!

IT'S GOOD WHEN THE SURRENDER OF UKRAINIAN SOLDIERS GOES SMOOTHLY. UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS NOT ALWAYS THE CASE: SURRENDERING IS NOT AS EASY AS IT SEEMS.

MOREOVER, AT THE FRONT, ANY RANDOM EVENT – LIKE A MALFUNCTIONING EVACUATION CART AND THE LACK OF ONE FROM THE NEIGHBORS – CAN BE FATAL. ESPECIALLY FOR THE SEVERELY WOUNDED.
